History of Slavery

Ancient Egypt - Slaves in Egypt were relied on to build the monuments and pyramids which stand today. They were also used in homes of rich Egyptians. Some Egyptians were sold into slavery because of debts or sold themselves to escape poverty. When pharaohs were fighting against Nubia, Canaan and Syria, they brought in prisoners of war, who were enslaved. They were sent to work in the gold or copper mines, where many died from exhaustion.

Aztec Slavery - This slavery was very different from what how Europeans were treating slaves. Slaves were not captured people. An Aztec could become a slave as a punishment. Those who did not pay their debts could also be sold as slaves but slavery was personal. It did not pass onto a slave's child. A slave could have possessions and even own other slaves. Slaves could buy their freedom and slaves could be set free if they were able to show they had been mistreated.

Modern Slavery - There are an estimated 21-29 million people who are still slaves today. Modern slavery is a multi-billion dollar industry and possible makes up to $35 billion every year. Some of the worst hit places in the world for slave labour include West Africa and India. Child slavery is also a major problem. This group makes up the majority of slaves in the world today. Most are workers in cocoa, cotton or fishing industries.
